Sandwich Historical Recollections

The Lincoln-Belmont-Ashland shopping district was the busiest Chicago had to offer outside of the Loop. In its busiest years there were many retail stores. Our sandwiches are named in memory of those famous retailers.

The Woolworth - "Woolworth's 5&10 cents store was located at the southwest corner of Lincoln & School Streets. It was my understanding that this store, if not the first, was one of the originals that began a storied success for Woolworth's for many years.

The Goldblatt - the retail store was located on Lincoln, south of Belmont. Early retailers would say there were different shoppers, those who shopped south of Belmont and those who would shop north of Belmont.

The Wieboldt - named for the major anchor of the shopping district. Look out for Thursdays when the weekly newspaper, the "Lincoln Belmont Booster" ran Wieboldt's ads. We had to let our sales staff have a little longer lunch break so they could get the Wieboldt's sale item.

The Kotz - Kotz's shoe store located at the northeast corner of School & Lincoln had lots of competitors. But the personal service of Marshall Kotz put his shoe store a foot above the others.

The Rothschild - named after Rothschild's clothing store, located on the southwest corner of the Lincoln-Belmont-Ashland intersection, where Central Savings is now located.

Ziggy's - named for Zig Lekan, founder of the Paulina Market. Originally on Paulina, it moved to its present day location a block north of the bakery on Lincoln avenue. We are proud to serve its hams, bacon and other fine meats.

Harry Starr - to our immediate south is the Brundage Building. The building really should be named for Harry Starr who purchased it when the bank it housed collapsed in the 1929 depression. Harry was a real estate broker, currency exchange merchant and a safety deposit box caretaker. Only problem was Harry forgot the vault's combination, the vault was never locked, and in the 1970's the boxes were all broken into on a summer Saturday night.

Andy Meyer's Turkey - is in honor of Meyer's Delicatessen, which was located on Lincoln Avenue south of REXX Carpeting.

Robert Hall - Robert Hall Clothing store was located on Ashland just south of Belmont had great deals on men's suits and childrens clothing.

Norm Ballin - Started the pharmacy in 1948, located across the street from the bakery and served the community for over 50 years.

Kid's Menu sandwiches are named in honor of Hamilton School, the Kukla, Fran and Ollie Show and Felger Park.

On behalf of the Dinkel family, and our staff, we thank you for your patronage and we thank you for shopping at a family owned business that has served the community since 1922.
